The Museum of Teaching And Learning (MOTAL) To Host Benefit To Support Their Latest Exhibit,
*Two Roads, One Journey: Education in China and the U.S.

FULLERTON, CA--October 6, 2014—The Museum of Teaching and Learning (MOTAL) announced that it will host a fundraiser in support of their next project, Two Roads, One Journey: Education in China and the U.S. expected to open for exhibition in spring of 2015. The event will host prominent Orange County celebrity appraiser, Yvonne Karn—a Senior Member of The American Society of Appraisers who has been successfully appraising personal property, conducting personal sales and brokering since 1975.

For an admission fee of $55 (or $500 for a table of 10), event attendees will be treated to a welcome reception, silent auction, gourmet lunch and dessert followed by a presentation from Karn. She will share professional, “insider” tips on what you should do to protect your heirlooms, what’s hot and what’s not in today’s antique market, how to look for items of value and offer a current view on owning and caring for ivory. Even more exciting, eight attendees will receive a complimentary appraisal by Yvonne Karn of an item of their choice.

All proceeds from the event will support Two Roads, One Journey: Education in China and the U.S. The exhibit will bring together the power and cultural influences of education in the United States and China, showcasing the points of pride and challenge for both countries. The exhibit will explore how education can be improved and take visitors on a thought-provoking journey into what goes on inside these dynamically different classrooms.

“We are delighted to bring our research to life,” states Founder Greta Nagel, Ph.D., “while offering the world a fresh perspective on the educational relationship between the two world powers. Our Creative Team is comprised of talented individuals with backgrounds and deep experience in both American and China--some of the best and brightest in the field of education and exhibit design. They truly understand the importance of education and the global impact it has on all of our futures. Our hope is that this launch event will not only provide MOTAL with an opportunity to live our mission of providing quality educational events, but offer us much needed resources to springboard the exhibit’s creation.”
